

If the cable companies had to allow other ISPs to use their cables I would save $20 a month because I would not need a phone line. A different ISP would allow me to get a static IP address over cable and run a server, thus providing an alternative to DSL. As things stand, DSL is my only choice, and DSL requires a telephone line I don't use.